This is not a compulsory, nor comprehensive, listening list but does provide a broad exposure to different genres, traditions and styles across the centuries and decades. Of course, it does not have to be listened to in chronological order but can be mixed up – there will often be pieces that will match nicely to areas of study too.

This can be used as a working document to indicate those pieces that children have been listening to over the school year, ticking them off as they are listened to and noting any comments children might make on each piece. Enabling children to listen to as many of these pieces as possible is a great way of building on their cultural capital.
